FARM MEMBERS HAVE PROGRAM

Propose Agricultural Legislation at Short Session.

THREE MEASURES OUTLINED

Relief For Live Stock Men, Adoption of New Plan to Encourage Co-operative Marketing and Congressional Sanction of Movement to Readjust Freight Rates to Be Sought by Members From Agricultural States.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Senator Capper, one of the farm bloc leaders in the senate, proposes a three-fold program of agricultural legislation for the short session of congress, as follows:

First—A relief measure, for live stock and cattle men, who have failed to realize the success of grain farmers through increased prices and are still reported in financial distress.

Second—Adoption of a new plan to encourage co-operative marketing of all agricultural products.

Third—Congressional sanction of a movement to readjust freight rates on all commodities so that agricultural products may be benefited.

The agricultural commission is expected by members of congress studying the question to submit a preliminary report within the next month, recommending these features as the basis for legislation. Those most directly connected with farm aid measures declared themselves optimistic over the attitude the president will take toward the report. Senator Capper said that in his opinion the commission's report would offer a solution of the farmers' difficulties.

According to Senator Capper, the domestic marketing situation can be solved by properly operated co-operative marketing agencies with federal support, and the European market can be stimulated through the service of the diplomats and attaches of the commerce department. Before the American farmer can receive permanent relief, the Kansas senator said, some means must be provided to overcome South American competition in the live stock trade and Canadian competition in the wheat trade. He believed this could be done by co-operation between the American foreign agents and the department of agriculture.

Senator Capper declared government influence for lower interest rates would offer temporary aid. The conference report on the Smith resolution, recommending to the interstate commerce commission the reclassification of rates to give a preferential rate to the farmer, is pending. Chairman Norris of the senate agriculture committee said he would make no move to form farm legislation until he learned the attitude of the congressmen toward the report of the agricultural commission.

ESCAPES ELECTRIC CHAIR

Brady, Wife Slayer, to Serve Life Term in Penitentiary.

Columbus, Nov. 28.—James A. Brady, Sandusky wife slayer, escaped the death chair when his sentence was commuted by Governor Donahue to life imprisonment. For over a year Brady had been fighting to escape execution, to which he was sentenced by the Erie county common pleas court for the murder of his wife. He was sentenced to die on May 23, 1924, but three times was reprieved by the governor. Brady's case was fought through the Erie county court of appeals and then taken to the state supreme court. Each time his sentence was confirmed.

Brady killed his wife in a fit of rage after she had refused to withdraw divorce proceedings which she instituted. The deed was committed with a razor and a hammer, which were in the room where Brady and his wife started an argument, which precipitated the crime. The defense claimed that although Brady had been sentenced to the chair for first degree murder he had not committed first degree murder, because of lack of malice aforethought at the time.

To Redeem Bonds.

New York, Nov. 28.—The Northwestern Bell Telephone company announced that it had called its $30,000,000 issue of first mortgage 7 per cent bonds for redemption on Feb. 1, 1925, at a price of 107½. The loan, which was floated in 1921, when investment market conditions demanded a high interest rate, did not mature until 1931. Retirement of the bonds probably will be financed by the issue of additional capital stock.

DAVIS PRESENTS REPORT

Takes Stand Against One-Year Enlistments in Army.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Major General Robert C. Davis, adjutant general, in his annual report, renews objections to the law requiring that one-year enlistments be accepted if the recruit prefers that term rather than a three-year term. He says experience has demonstrated the undesirability of such enlistments, although congress failed to take action on bills to remedy the situation submitted during the last session. "The services of a one-year man can seldom be utilized to advantage in the training of others," General Davis pointed out, for the reason that he himself has not become sufficiently well trained for the purpose. Neither are these short term men available for service in overseas garrisons, because of the time necessarily lost in transporting them thither and then back again for discharge within a year.

BRING 36 PER CENT OF THE COST PRICE

Sale of Surplus Army Goods During Fiscal Year.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Assistant Secretary of War Dwight Davis in his annual report announces the sale of surplus material valued at $123,000,000 by the war department during the 1924 fiscal year at a return of about 36 per cent of the cost price. As about half the articles sold were used material or broken-up ammunition, he explained, the return against cost price was lower than in previous years. Transfers and withdrawals brought the total of surplus dispositions during the year up to more than $187,000,000, and the total since the war up to $3,166,000,000.

The year's results brought the remaining war surplus stock so low that Mr. Davis said he hoped to be able to recommend within another six months transfer of the sales work on these stores to the regular supply branches of the army, which now handle salvaged material. He placed the value of the remaining surplus stocks at $68,000,000, of which $27,000,000 is in land and improvements.

RESIDENCE WRECKED

Deputy Marshal and His Family Escape Serious Injury.

Canton, O., Nov. 28.—A charge of dynamite wrecked the home of Lawrence Hein, deputy marshal of Waynesburg, at an early hour. Mr. and Mrs. Hein and their four sons were in the house sleeping at the time. The force of the explosion stunned Mr. Hein and blew two of his sons out of bed. The front porch of the dwelling was torn off and all the windows in the lower floor were shattered. The charge evidently had been placed in or near a cellar window, as the cellar wall on one side was blown out. The interior of the house also was badly damaged. Practically every person in the town heard the noise of the blast. Mr. Hein, as deputy marshal, has been active during the past six months in raiding booze joints, according to residents of the village.

SEPARATE DRY BUREAU SOUGHT

Anti-Saloon League Gets Behind the Crampton Bill.

AT ODDS WITH FEDERAL JUDGES

Latter Would Transfer the Prohibition Enforcement Unit From the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice—Anti-Saloon Leaders Would Have Separate Bureau Under a Responsible Head.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Officials of the Anti-Saloon league are formulating plans for tightening prohibition enforcement through action of congress.

Conflicting views are held by the league officials and the conference of senior federal circuit judges, which recommended the immediate transfer of the national prohibition unit from the treasury department to the department of justice. The judges recommended that all appropriations for enforcement should be expended under the direction of the attorney general of the United States. "Legislation putting into effect these recommendations," its report said, "would make for effectiveness in enforcing the prohibition law."

Neither of these recommendations are included in the program of the Anti-Saloon league, as set forth in resolutions adopted by its executive committee here and presented to President Coolidge and Attorney General Harlan F. Stone. The president granted an audience to the members of the executive committee, headed by Wayne B. Wheeler.

Admitting in the preamble of its resolutions that "the law enforcement situation in the nation demands the serious consideration of the congress, the executive and the judicial departments of the government," the executive committee sought executive sanction of the Crampton bill to establish the prohibition unit as a separate bureau under a responsible head. If this bill were to be enacted, neither the treasury department nor the department of justice would have direct supervision over the work of the prohibition enforcement officials.

"The attempted prosecution of trivial, futile and unimportant cases which now crowd the dockets," the jurists' resolution says, "through the ill-advised zeal and practical ignorance of prohibition agents, can be avoided, and only those cases taken up and pressed which will really deter the principal offenders and in the preparation of which district attorneys will have a personal responsibility."

In the opinion of Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, the proposal of the judicial conference that prohibition enforcement be concentrated under the department of justice, "would result in making the present situation 'worse, not better.'"

Saying the proposal had been rejected many times "as unwise," Wheeler declared control of industrial and nonbeverage liquor "can not be appropriately transferred to the justice department," and "we would be swamped in bootleg liquor." "To put the responsibility for all of this work in the hands of district attorneys," he added, "would jeopardize enforcement in many sections where these officers are now failing. They could cover their failure completely under the proposed plan."

PLOTTERS SEIZED BY THE BRITISH

Roundup in Egypt Follows Murder of General Stack.

LEADERS NOW UNDER ARREST

Those Taken Into Custody Will Be Handed Over Later to the Egyptian Government—Arrests Regarded as a Preventive Measure and No Disorders Followed the British Authorities' Action.

London, Nov. 28.—Anti-British plotters in Egypt are being seized by the British officials.

Among the prominent Egyptians in custody are Nekrashi Bey, Zagloul Pasha's minister of the interior, and Abdul Rahman Fahmy. Discovery of plots were made by the British in their investigations after the murder of Major General Sir Lee Stack, the sirdar. For the most part the alleged plotters are said to belong to the groups of extremists, who aim at achieving the complete independence of their country. The men arrested were leaders in a conspiracy against British inhabitants, which probably was partly responsible for the murder of Sirdar Stack.

Fear was expressed that this action on the part of the British might result in another Egyptian ministerial crisis, but it was announced at Cairo, after a cabinet council, that there would be no ministerial resignations, as the British authorities had accepted Premier Ziwari's proposal that the men taken into custody should be handed over to the Egyptians to be dealt with. Arrest of these nationalists is regarded as merely a preventive measure and they will be placed only under observation and control. No manifestations or disorders have followed the arrests, and throughout Egypt calm still prevails. There is no hint of any active opposition to the withdrawal of the Egyptian units from the Sudan. The withdrawal is expected to be completed by the end of the week, it was said here.

In addition to county, state and national farm bureau meetings, group gatherings will be held in a number of four-county districts to nominate members on the board of directors of the Ohio Federation.

Missionaries Missing.

Shanghai, Nov. 28.—Misses Elizabeth Berglund and Ingeborg Nystal, Americans attached to the Augustana synod mission at Juchow, Honan province, 55 miles west of Shanghai, are missing after capture of the town by Chinese bandits, according to a message from Hankow. All other foreigners escaped to Kiasien, 25 miles away. Bandits are holding the Rev. Arne Onda for $100,000 and 20 rifles ransom since his capture at Sichwan, Honan province.

Attacked by Rum Runners.

New York, Nov. 28.—The French steamer Francisca unloaded her cargo to a small schooner lying off rum row, and the crew retired for the night. The schooner, after standing by for some time, suddenly attacked the Francisca. The stranger's crew, apparently bent on recovering the money paid for the cargo, swarmed over the sides of the Francisca and forced the officer into his cabin. He managed to escape and roused the members of his own crew, who, after a short gun battle, drove the attacking party, composed of Americans under a Canadian leader, back to its own boat.

VIRGINIA MILITARY LANDS

Ohio State University Making Effort to Solve Legal Tangles.

Columbus, Nov. 28.—The Ohio State university is making an effort to solve the legal problems involving titles to Ohio lands set aside in 1790 by Virginia to award her veterans of the Revolution. The land, consisting originally of millions of acres lying between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers, was retained by Virginia when she ceded to the general government her title to the Northwest territory. The region has since been known as the Virginia military lands and lies in 23 Ohio counties. In 1871, the residue, consisting of unsold, unsurveyed and unpatented lands, was ceded to the state of Ohio by the general government. Thirteen months later this land was ceded in turn by the state government to the Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical college, as the Ohio State university was originally known, as part of its permanent endowment. Because of a haphazard method of distributing the land, partly because of the encroachments of squatters and some of the land has remained unpatented and the title clouded. With the recent appointment of Attorney Frank M. Raymond of Columbus as agent for the Virginia military lands, efforts are being made by the university to help the present occupants or owners to clear their titles to the land.

Vessel Lost In Storm.

New York, Nov. 28.—Information was received here to the effect that 11 members of a rum runner's crew, their boat and its $400,000 cargo are believed to have been lost in one of the storms that have been sweeping the Atlantic. Shipping circles believe that the tug William Maloney, formerly the Capitol, had gone down with all hands, somewhere between London, Conn., and Newport, R. I. The craft was said to have 1,000 cases of whisky aboard, purchased of Montauk Point.

AUTO GOES INTO DITCH

Three Persons Lose Lives and Fourth Injured Seriously.

Newark, O., Nov. 28.—Sidney Jones, 32; Mrs. Harvey Plummer, 27, and P. J. Sprigle, 34, were killed when their automobile went into a deep ditch south of this city. Mrs. Katherine Davis, 28, was injured seriously. According to Mrs. Davis, they were returning from a party at Buckeye Lake when the machine skidded as they were coming down a hill. Jones, who was driving the car, lost control and the car crashed into a ditch, the machine overturning on top of the party.

Newark police released the victims, who were pinned under the automobile, after being notified by farmers who heard the crash.

Druggist Held Up.

Covington, Ky., Nov. 28.—Two bandits forced George J. Massman, druggist, to the back room of his store, where at the point of a revolver he was made to open a safe. About $300 in cash and a diamond ring was taken from the safe and about $200 from the cash register. After locking Massman in the room the bandits escaped in an automobile.

RINGED WITH FIRE ONE NIGHT A YEAR

Capital of Tyrol Has Peculiar Celebration.

Rome.—One night in the year Merano, the ancient capital of the Tyrol, is a city ringed with fire.

By the arbitrament of war Merano's today Italian territory. A few years ago it was Austrian, known as Meran and peopled by 12,000 Austrians speaking the German tongue. In the years to come it may, perhaps, salute another flag.

The city's proudest boast, however, is that it has been and always will be Tyrolean. Roman and Hun and Goth and Saracen have never succeeded in leaving much of an imprint upon the character and habits of these picturesque mountain people.

The nine hundred-year-old Schloss Tyrol, the residence of the counts of Tyrol until they became extinct, still stands sentinel, reminder of a vanished glory.

Merano is a jewel spot as well as the one-time capital of this land of rugged peaks and rushing streams, land of old and beautiful customs and traditions that have been handed down from generation to generation through the long ticking of the centuries.

Origin of Celebration.

On the night of June 24 the celebration known as "Sonnenwendfeier" or "Sonnenfest" is held. It is also called by some "Johannisfeier" in honor of John the Baptist, who was supposed to have been born on that day. The celebration did not have its origin in honor of John the Baptist, but because June 24, according to the Tyroleans of the long ago, marked the longest day of the year.

Merano is seated in the bottom of a mighty limestone cup, the precipitous sides of which rise almost immediately above the town in varying heights up to 10,000 feet.

It is these gaunt rocks, these towering summits, these unscalable precipices that make the "Sonnenwendfeier" such a thing of beauty—for it is the changeless law of the Tyrolese that their fires shall blaze from the highest peaks, the most inaccessible points of the sky line.

Days before the celebration the Tyroleans, in groups of five, or ten or twenty, begin their preparations for the fiery night. One group will select this summit for their fire, another group will select these two points, and so on until every crest is an almost continuous, though irregular, circle of piles of firewood waiting the hour to be touched off. The city seems completely surrounded. Every fire must blaze against the sky. There must be no higher peak in the background to dwarf the glory of a single flame.

No Weakling's Job.

Preparing for these great fires is no weakling's game. The carrying of heavy and cumbersome bundles of fagots up mountain slopes to a height of 10,000 feet is mountain climbing with a very serious handicap.

Scarcely has the sun of the summer day slipped behind the Zilspeitz when, here and there, at widely different points of the compass and at varying heights, little clouds of blue smoke ascending above the rugged peaks announce to the watchers in the city below that the first fires have been lighted. Soon smoke clouds are arising from a thousand fires—north, east, south and west wisps of smoke curl against the darkening sky. As the summer night deepens the fires are seen, intermittent at first, like fireflies. Then they burn steadily.

The thing has been perfectly timed, and when the last faint light from the vanished sun has gone from the west the great fires are burning splendidly against the night.

Venus de Milo Never Had Arms, Says Dr. Edde

Paris.—It may be some consolation to art lovers throughout the world, who have wondered in what position were the missing arms of the famous Venus de Milo statue in the Louvre, to learn that even the ancients themselves were perplexed on this point.

Doctor Edde, a French physician, has just made known that during a recent visit to Egypt he came into possession of a small bronze statuette of the same period as the Venus de Milo. This statuette is an exact copy of the famous Venus, and like the original, it has no arms. Doctor Edde therefore concludes that the Venus de Milo never at any time had arms, and he believes the sculptor, when he had carved out of the stone such a divine form, gave up all idea of adding arms.

When the Venus de Milo was discovered on the island of Milo a large reward was offered to anyone who could find the arms, but in spite of extensive search nothing was discovered.

Freak Apple Tree Grows Queer Fruit

Cashmere, Wash.—Apple trees trained against a perpendicular rock cliff near here this season produced remarkable fruit. While the apples are large and well formed, they were colored only on one side because the sun and light could not paint the one next to the cliff. The trees were planted by John Ishmer and the branches pruned and trained to grow close to the rocks. Ishmer says the roots found perpetual moisture in the debris at the foot of the cliff.

FREE GOLD FISH

(Including Fish Bowl.)

We are giving away a crystal bowl containing two gold fish, with the purchase of a fifty cent box of Lac-Lax, the delicious candy laxative. Children delight in these lively gold fish, the goldfish we could find anywhere. They are fascinating to grownups, too, and the clear crystal of the aquarium reflecting the golden flashes of alert, busy little inhabitants adds an ornamental touch to the home. We couldn't think of a more acceptable gift with which to introduce this very mild and pleasant laxative. And a laxative of this kind is very important at this particular time. Lac-Lax are mild and harmless, nothing habit-forming about them. Grown folks like them and children really delight in taking them, for they are just like mint lozengers.

Accessories Can Make or Mar Chic Costume

"A lady is known," goes the old saying, "by her shoes and her pocket-handkerchiefs." And certainly care in buying the accessories of dress does, to a very great extent, insure a well-groomed appearance, says a writer in the Kansas City Star.

Care in buying accessories does not mean the expenditure of much time, money and energy in selecting all the gewgaws with which one can load oneself. Indeed the old rule for achieving a well-dressed appearance is still apropos—"Go to the mirror after you are dressed, and see what you can take off." Accessories—hats, gloves, fans, handkerchiefs, beads, bracelets, veils—may be counted upon either to add much to or detract much from the general effect; they are seldom neutral. So they must be tastefully selected, and, above all, they must not be indiscriminately worn.

Now, a hat is such an important adjunct to the costume that it is almost more than a mere accessory. It is important both as a frame to the face and in its relationship to the rest of the costume. If you wear a plain, tailored dress or suit, for instance, the sailor hat or some other tailored shape should be chosen. If your costume is more elaborate, you may allow yourself somewhat fancier headgear. In general, it is well, when you select a hat, to wear the costume with which you intend to use it.

Veils, like hats, must be appropriate to the costume; for, though beautiful and becoming when happily chosen, a veil often is out of place. The rule which should be your guide in knowing when you should wear a veil is this: Wear it only when there's a logical reason for doing so, such as to add to the beauty of the hat, or to protect the face. Of course, your veil can never be attractive if it is not delicate and fresh.

Gloves, again, should be in harmony with the rest of the costume. Do not wear kid gloves with a lingerie dress, or, even worse, silk gloves with furs.

Dainty handkerchiefs, too, may be selected to match the costume, though plain white linen handkerchiefs of excellent quality are always in good taste.

When it comes to beads, bracelets, artificial flowers and the like, wear them only when they are suitable for the time, place and occasion and when they add definitely to your appearance. It is quite proper for you to buy accessories to suit every costume you own—but it isn't proper for you to wear them all at once.

Pajamas With Kimono to Match, Late Style

In a recent exhibition of negligees and lingerie a gay little sign, done in Chinese letters, called attention to the influence that the Orient has had upon fashions for leisure hours. And to emphasize this fact there were shown the most alluring new models. These consisted of pajamas with a kimono to match. The upper part of the pajamas was cut on the lines of a Chinese coat, reaching just to the knees and embroidered in bright colors.

Fashioned of black satin, which brings out in striking relief the vivid flower designs, they have shades of the same brilliant shade that lines the kimono. One exceedingly beautiful one is lined with crepe de chine, in color a rich tone of Chinese red. The flowers that decorate both the coat and the kimono are in shades ranging from a faint coral to a brilliant flame.

Equally stunning is another costume, also of black satin, but exquisitely embroidered in silver. On this the sash of satin is fringed with silver. Nothing more unusual or smarter has been introduced in many a day and the girl who wishes to be ahead where fashion is concerned will speedily provide herself with the latest thing in lounging attire.

FOOTBALL

Circleville Eagles Lose Game to Wellston by One Touchdown.

For the second time this season the Circleville Eagle football team journeyed to Wellston to lose out by the margin of one touchdown, and without any attempt to crab we wish to say right here that the touchdown credited to the home team was a very questionable decision.

The score came in the first quarter. Circleville had decided on a policy of forward passing for the game and an intercepted pass gave the ball to Wellston in Circleville territory.

Wellston fumbled to Circleville, who not to be out done in generosity fumbled back the ball going to the home team on the thirty yard line.

A series of live players carried the ball to the four yard line first down, Circleville braced and after the second plunge Wellston still had eighteen inches to go; the third play did not gain an inch and apparently the ball had not gone beyond the line of a scrimmage on the last attempt when the whistle blew, but was pushed up to the line and the referee decided it touched the white line that is denied by Circleville, who claim that even after it was pushed up the oval was still inches short of a touchdown.

Wellston did not again threaten during the game and in the final quarter a series of passes by Circleville looked like a possible score, but two unfortunate fumbles of balls that looked good broke up the procession.

UP TO SUPREME COURT

Banker Daugherty Defends His Refusal to Testify.

Washington, Nov. 28.—The United States supreme court at an early date will pass upon the defense of M. S. Daugherty, brother of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, of his refusal to furnish the senate certain information concerning the affairs of the Midland National bank of Washington C. H. O., of which he is president. He insisted that the senate investigation was not legislative in character, but was an attempt to prosecute his brother; challenged the power of the senate to compel recalcitrant witnesses to testify and asserted that in the formulation of legislation congress, before it can compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses, must, through the two houses, declare its purpose and demand the information. M. S. Daugherty insisted that the action of the Fayette county court of Ohio, which enjoined the senate committee from examining the books of the bank, is still in effect.

THE WEATHER.

Ohio—Saturday: Unsettled.

Acquired by Corporation.
New York, Nov. 28.—The Wagner Baking company of Detroit, established more than half a century ago, has been acquired by the recently organized Continental Baking corporation, through purchase of all its outstanding capital stock, it was announced by George J. Barber, chairman of the Continental. The Wagner family, it was stated, would continue its interest in the Detroit plant, which is one of the largest in the country. H. J. C. Wagner was elected president.

Case Not to Be Reopened.
Washington, Nov. 28.—The case involving the settlement of the tax on the estate of W. H. Parlin of Canton, Ill., was inquired into by the senate committee investigating the internal revenue bureau. A field agent of the bureau recommended a tax of $358,000, and a board of review, taking the stand that a transfer to nieces and nephews of $3,800,000 was made by Parlin in contemplation of death, sustained the agent. The bureau solicitor, however, decided the heirs were not required to pay the tax. Chairman Couzens said that since the government had decided in favor of the taxpayer it could not reopen the case.

 NEW AVIATION LANDING FIELD.

A new airplane landing field, the donation of Henry and Edsel Ford, which was recently completed at Dearborn, Michigan, will be known as "Ford Airport," according to announcement just made. The donation is purely in the interest of commercial aviation, for it is understood there is no intention on the part of the Ford Motor company to go into airplane business, other than to watch its development.

All pilots will be welcome at the field and it is large enough to take care of the largest types of ships. It also is expected that the field will be the terminal for airline companies now being formed to operate between Detroit and other large cities. Gasoline, oil and before long a stock of parts will be available for visiting fliers.

The field has two 300 foot runways, one 3,700 feet and the other 3,400 feet long, both in the direction of prevailing winds. More than twenty miles or draining tile was laid for quick drainage in wet weather in order that the field might be suitable for year-round operation.

In the center of the field the name "Ford" appears in letters 200 feet high made of white crushed stone. This is visible from an altitude of 10,000 feet. When conditions warrant arrangements will be made for illuminating the field at night.

There is an ample hangar and in the same building airplane manufacturing operations are being carried on by the Stout Metal Airplane company and the Aircraft Development company.

C. A. C. Loses Opening Game Thursday Night by Score of 41 to 31.

In a hard fought game at the C. A. C. gymnasium Thursday night the locals came out on the short end of a 41 to 31 score. They went down fighting and proved to fans that before many games have passed they will be an aggregation hard to beat.

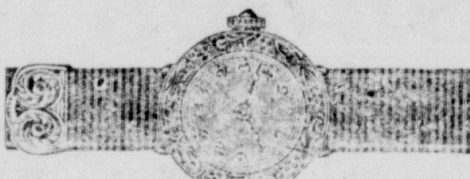

The visitors had a fast well balanced team and the Stoll was their favorable point there really were no particular stars as the locals defense was rather weak in the early part of the game which gave the visitors a lead which could not be overcome although they did outplay them on the second half of the game.

The locals all played a hard game with the clean sportsmanlike spirit for which they are known and with a few more practices the defects will no doubt be ironed out.

Next Thursday night we meet the Broadway Clothiers. This team has a good reputation and fans are assured another good game and it is hoped they will receive the support they were tendered Thursday night.

AN OMISSION.

In our account of the recent ceremonies of the Eastern Star installation we inadvertently neglected to state that Mrs. Edith Monroe, the retiring worthy matron, presented to Mrs. Irma Stevenson, the newly elected worthy matron, a beautiful sandwich dish. The latter served as associate matron during the term of the former as worthy matron.

AN OLD MAN'S THANKSGIVING.
I who have seen the years depart
Fain would recall, if that might be,
All that lies shrouded within my heart
Of thankfulness of Used-to-be.

Gone youth and prime; I sit, today,
Alone with dreams, alone with tears;
I may not tread the rearward way
To Thankfulness of other years.

And yet I may, in dreaming wise,
Bid youth and love again return;
Again behold life's smiling skies
And feel its hopes within me burn!

For all about me, everywhere,
Is love and laughter's lifting song,
Youth's mockery of time and care—
Its hope, more strong than death is strong—

And so I thank Thee, gentle Lord,
For that I may, thru mists of tears,
Behold, once more, in sweet accord,
My well-beloved of yesteryears!

MOTHS! MOTHS!

What are they? Most people know but do you know? A solution for the protection of your clothes during the time they are not in use? You no doubt have noticed that moths will not work just in one spot but will eat a little here and there that is proof that there is something there they like. A sure prevention is to have your clothing thoroughly cleaned that destroys all moths; even the eggs or other germs that may be in the garment then pack them or hang them in a moth proof bag which we furnish free with each suit, coat or overcoat we clean.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Arab," the new Rex Ingram production for Metro opened today at the Met theater.

It is one of the greatest of Ingram's pictures, worthy in every way of the man who produced "The Four Horsemen" and "Scaramouche" and superbly acted by a cast that includes Ramon Navarro and Alice Terry.

The picture was filmed in Algiers and Tunis and it affords the most convincing of all arguments why pictures should be screened on the exact locale of the story, instead of at Hollywood studios. For Mr. Ingram, in going to the east, has brought back with him to the screen all of the glamorous enchantment that has beckoned to travelers thru all the ages.

"The Arab" gives you the Orient in all of its wonderful color and exotic life; an authentic background for a drama that holds the spectators tense with excitement.

Islam Breaks Loose

Ramon Navarro appears in the title role, as an Arab guide who falls in love with an American missionary's daughter, played by Alice Terry. He learns of the Turkish plan to massacre the Christians, only after the children from the mission are being led into the desert to certain death. He goes to their rescue, but, when he gets them back to the mission, the fanatical Moslems, roused to fury by their leaders break loose and attack the little Christian stronghold. Only a miracle can save them. But you must see the denouement for yourself. "The Arab" is a picture that nobody should miss. Successful some years ago on the stage, with Edgar Selwyn, who wrote it, in the title role, its effectiveness is tremendously enhanced on the screen.

MICHAEL GUNNING DEAD.

Like a bolt out of the blue came the news at half past four Tuesday afternoon that Michael Gunning, local district highway superintendent had answered the final summons. Mr. Gunning had been forced to take to his bed about ten days ago by an attack of rheumatism and a severe cold complicated with a heart attack but had seemingly weathered the storm, had returned to his duties in the highway department and had even seemed to enjoy his regular noonday contest in a threat game at the Elks club in which he took part Monday. But Tuesday he was again seized with a recurrent heart attack and the end came very suddenly and unexpectedly at his room in the Clinton apartments, Chillicothe.

Mr. Gunning was born at Sugar Grove, Ohio, March 24, 1853, the son of Lawrence and Bridget Gunning. He is survived by his wife, who is living in Los Angeles, having gone there two or three years ago to be with her son and daughter, Fred and Helen Gunning, but he returned after six months residence there saying he was lonesome for his old friends here, two sons, Harry L., and J. Robert Gunning of this city and another daughter, Mrs. V. H. Benton, of Huntington, West Virginia. Two brothers, Albert of Columbus and Andrew of this city also survive.

The funeral services will be held from the residence of his son, J. Robert Gunning on Bellevue avenue, at 2:30 p. m., Friday the local lodge of Elks officiating, assisted by Rev. Kelley Jessen. Interment in Grandview.—Scioto Gazette.

The deceased was the father-in-law of Mrs. Fred J. Gunning, Miss Helen Pickardt, of Los Angeles, California, formerly of this city.

A Model Thanksgiving Prayer.

"God of common good and human brotherhood, I give Thee thanks for the siren songs of temptation that lure and entangle and the understanding of other men reveal, for the weaknesses and failings of my neighbors and the joy of lending a helping hand for my own shortcomings, sorrows and loneliness, that give a deeper sympathy for others; for ingratitude and misunderstanding and the gladness of service without other regard than self-expression." —Arthur W. Newcomb

GIFT CAR MORE POPULAR THAN EVER.

"The gift car is a still more important Yuletide institution this year," says Bob Brehmer. "The American family seems to have a greater consciousness this year than ever of the economies and advantages of devoting a major part of the Christmas appropriation to a new auto."

"Nothing could be more constructive. The new car pleases everybody; it often actually adds to the family income. It always cut family expense for other things. One man explained this to me most vividly the other day. 'It isn't rent, groceries and clothes that lick up your salary as it is the infinite number of big and little incidental and entertainment expenses' he said. 'Our car cuts that pretty much out of our budget. The folks cheerfully forgo other expenditures and find that a gallon of gasoline opens the way to a lot of pleasure that used to cost real money.'"

Another Cure Discovered.

A tale that is told—admirably so with it if required—is of a woman who, while recovering from the current affliction of influenza, found herself a victim of obstinate insomnia. Hearing of this woe, her doctor gave her a tablet to take. This she put on a table close to her bed and when, as had become sad habit, sleep would not come, she reached out in the darkness, found the tablet and took it. A few minutes later she went to sleep and so continued till morning, when she woke much refreshed. But then she saw that the hypnotic disk was still on the table, though missing therefrom was a small porcelain button that she then remembered as having been there the night before! This story illustrates again the powers of faith and imagination.—New York Times.

KEEPING WELLFUR DERMATITIS

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

WITH the coming of cool weather every girl and woman fortunate enough to possess them gets out her furs for the winter. Furs have always been beloved by women and there has probably never been a time when they were more commonly worn. As a result of this universal demand and of the increasing cost of high class furs due to their scarcity, the world is being ransacked for skins of all kinds. Any animal, however small and humble, is hunted for its fur, which is dyed and sold under some trade name which does not even faintly resemble the original animal.

Some of the dyes used contain strong chemicals. When furs dyed with these drugs come in direct contact with the skin, they often cause severe irritation. The cheap furs are used principally to trim cloth coats, where the collars and cuffs come in close contact with the skin at the neck and wrist. Some of the deeper collars may touch the cheeks.

Every fall, when new winter coats are first put on, there are always a number of cases of skin poisoning from furs. This is particularly apt to occur with dyed rabbit's skin, sold under the trade name of "beaver coney." These furs are mostly imported from France, Belgium and Germany. The dye used is a coal tar dye, which is particularly irritating to the skin. When the fur comes into direct contact with the skin, particularly in the warmer days of early winter when the skin is moist from perspiration, the skin becomes irritated and reddened, particularly at the neck and around the wrists. This may become quite severe in some cases, the skin becoming red, scaling and cracking as in eczema. Soap and water, as in all cases of eczema, only make matters worse.

Avoid cheap, heavily dyed furs. If you must wear them, protect the skin from actual contact with the fur by wearing a silk scarf or muffler around the neck and by wearing gloves long enough to cover the wrists.

If your skin becomes irritated by furs, stop wearing them and use a plain talcum powder or a bland non-irritating salve such as 3 per cent zinc oxide ointment, until the irritation has disappeared.

with that "fresh air" taste

Delicious—and so beautiful in their even shape and coloring. And little wonder! For they were baked with "fresh air"—in the wonderful oven of the Estate Gas Range. The fumes of burning gas never enter this oven—only fresh air, heated and sterilized by the exclusive Estate method, touches the food.

And this heated fresh air is distributed so uniformly throughout the oven that no matter in what part you place your baking, the same uniform results are certain. No "pot-watching", no shifting pans—the oven ends all this worry.

Decide today you'll be one of the many thousands of good cooks using the Estate. We'll gladly show you the range and all its features.

Motor Charity and Cupid

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

UNDER other circumstances Ben Gleason would have enjoyed the walk along the smooth country turnpike, fresh autumn air blowing in his face, bringing back half-shaped recollections of autumn days of his boyhood. As it was, Ben felt wrath and indignation—wrath at his younger brother for having driven Ben's car across country and back the day before without replenishing the gasoline supply, and indignation at himself for not having noticed so important a detail before starting out. If things had gone as he expected he would have had ample time to get to Hillcrest for that important legal conference at the appointed hour.

Finding himself without gasoline, with his car stopped dead still on the roadside just five miles from anywhere, didn't seem like so great an obstacle at first. Ben had an idea that all he would have to do was to hail the next car, beg some gasoline and then go on his way.

The first motorist he had hailed proved to be a pretty girl, driving alone with her dog. At sight of the tall, broad-shouldered young man signaling for help at the roadside the pretty girl pulled her soft hat down over her nose and sped along all the faster. A middle-aged man and woman came along next in a stuttering old touring car. At sight of Ben the woman held her hands up to her face in apparent dismay and her companion at the wheel squeezed what speed he could out of his old vehicle.

Ben had locked his car and had started off walking in the direction of a farmhouse some miles back, hoping that there he might be able to telephone to a garage for help or otherwise find a solution for his problem, when Margaret Oliver came spinning along in her comfortable little roadster. He hailed her, but barely expected a response. To his surprise she drew in to the roadside and asked Ben if she could give him a lift. Ben explained that the abandoned car further along was his and that he wanted to get to Hillcrest or to a garage.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Margaret, opening the door of her little car. "You get in here and I'll drive you to Hillcrest."

"But you're going in the opposite direction," said Ben, who nevertheless took the proffered seat at Margaret's side. "You don't want to turn around and go to Hillcrest?"

"It won't take long," said Margaret. "That certainly is mighty kind of you," said Ben, sincerely grateful. "It's most uncommonly considerate—"

"It's only what you'd do for a fellow motorist yourself," said Margaret. "I thought it was a sort of unwritten law of the road to help each other that way."

"Not on this road," said Ben emphatically. "I've called out to every car or truck that passed and you were the only one that stopped."

Margaret laughed. "Probably they are afraid," she suggested. "Haven't you heard of our gentleman bandit that's been holding up motorists lately?"

"At least you weren't afraid," said Ben. "I should think people could tell a bandit when they saw one."

"Oh, but the people who have been held up say that this one is very good-looking. Anyway, bandits never look the way you expect they are going to. I might be one, too, but I'm not, and I don't believe you are, either." They sped along together in silence for a few minutes. Then as they neared the group of country homes that marked Hillcrest, Ben noticed with satisfaction that he still had time to arrive at the home of his client, Mr. Matthew Clark, ten minutes before the hour set for the conference.

"You could just drop me at the Clark place," suggested Ben as they drew into Hillcrest. "I'm no end grateful to you. It's an important business appointment, and I understand he's rather easily irritated. If I'd been late I might have lost out entirely."

Margaret laughed. "Yes, Uncle Matthew is easily irritated," she said. "I ought to know, because I happen to live with him. I'm his ward. He hates people to be late. But he has his good traits—Uncle Matthew has."

Ben felt some confusion and showed it. Margaret let him out at the road entrance, not wishing to drive up to the house.

"Don't let uncle know how you got here," she said. "It would make a bad impression. Besides, he'd have a fit if he knew I gave a stranger a lift. He was warning me about that bandit only this morning. Now, I'll run over to the garage and get 'em to go bring in your car. It'll be here waiting for you when you want it."

Mr. Clark was so well impressed with the young lawyer sent out from his law firm that he insisted on having him stay for dinner, and it was there that Ben was formally introduced to Margaret Oliver, Mr. Clark's very charming niece and sole heiress.

A month later when they announced their engagement Mr. Clark chortled to himself. He had played match-maker for the first time in his life and had succeeded.

Margaret had a confession to make to Ben. "I must tell you," she said, "that when I gave you a lift that day, I truly thought you were the good-looking bandit. I was scouring the country for him. It seemed so exciting to think of meeting a real bandit, and I wanted to see what would happen. And see what did happen!"

Sick Poultry Can Be Cured Any Season of the Year.

Circleville, O., R. F. D. 6, September 23, 1924.

Mrs. Edward H. Wardell, winner of Grand Sweep Stakes for best dozen eggs in show in Ohio State university, held February, 1924, says:

Mr. F. L. Fickardt, Dear Sir:—
I am only too glad to recommend Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops to any one interested in poultry, as the best preventative for contagious diseases I know of, on the market today. About three years ago cholera broke out in my flock of young chickens, which were then about six weeks old and weighing about 1½ pounds. There were 175 birds in this flock. As soon as I discovered they were sick I began treating them according to instructions of a specialist. I only lost eleven out of 175, and checked the disease in about three days. At that time Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops was recommended to me as a wonderful medicine to be used as a preventive of contagious diseases. At that time I began using the Drops and have not had an epidemic since, altho I lose one or two now and then from common causes such as apoplexy, egg-bound, etc. I begin giving it to the chicks when they are quite young and from that time on they are never without it. At the present time I am shipping two cases of eggs a week and have been for the last six months, from my flock of 180 hens and I attribute this high egg production to the healthy condition of my flock. I always grade and candle my eggs and I have attained such a degree of perfection that I have less than three per cent of my eggs that do not run over the specified weight of 24 ounces to the dozen. Sincerely,

Mrs. Edward H. Wardell.

70 Miles of Ruberoid!

The illustration shows the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, England, where 70 miles of Ruberoid Roofing were used on more than 150 buildings.

Ruberoid was selected only after the architects and contractors had conducted exhaustive tests to determine the most suitable roofing from the standpoint of appearance, reliability, cost, and weather and fire resistance.

Ruberoid was the only prepared roofing used for permanent or semi-permanent buildings, including the Fine Arts Palace, which houses an art collection of incalculable value.

The confidence of the architects was completely justified when, during May, a record rainfall of 93 tons per acre deluged the Exposition and the Ruberoid Roofs kept the buildings absolutely dry.

There is a Ruberoid Roofing for every building. Come in or phone us today for samples and descriptive folders.

HAVE ALL GOOD.—The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger: but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing.—Ps. 34:10

Despite Veneer, Chapman Is Uncompromising Foe of Society.

New York.—The unconventional has always caught popular fancy. Lawlessness, for some strange reason, has ever been surrounded by a curious and certainly undesired glamour. Train robbers have been made into heroes. Criminals of all sorts and degrees have been somehow elevated, sometimes envied, often admired, particularly if they had the suave background of a Mr. Raffles.

Public interest has once again been aroused in Gerald Chapman, a desperate and uncompromising enemy of society, an escaped convict. He, who ought now to be serving the earlier years of a 25-year sentence at the Federal penitentiary in Atlanta, has been sought as the murderer of a policeman in New Britain.

A Trace of Sympathy.

Somehow, there is a trace of sympathy for the man. Why? Because he started with small robberies? Because he planned and executed the notorious $1,500,000 mail robbery here three years ago almost to this date? Because he was sentenced to Atlanta for a long term? Because he escaped twice, the third time never to be seen again until he was seen to shoot down the New Britain policeman?

Why? Because he fought against great odds? Because he took what wasn't his just because he wanted it? Or is it because the public realizes that Chapman's inspiration is not that of courage and daring, not that of a master mind, but that of a criminal who would let nothing stand in his way?

Gerald Chapman is a curious man. His manner is that of a gentleman. He seems to have more than a veneer of breeding. Some character, some gentility, must have been born in him. It has been noticeable every time he has been under close scrutiny.

As he appears, Gerald Chapman is a name that suits him. He seems gentle and dignified. He is well-mannered. He is polite and considerate to women and not overmuch so as one might expect from one who acts. He is invariably well attired. He spends. He lives luxuriously.

Whether his name is Gerald Chapman or not few know. He has for aliases George Charters, Edward Bryce and Maxwell Winters. If not more. Where he came from no one knows, although he has stated repeatedly his family is one of excellent character.

Chapman is about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs around 140 pounds. His features are thin and he has high cheek bones. He has a long, sloping forehead and looks like a mild frequenter of public libraries. His chin slopes back sharply. He seems rather spare on the whole and is now about thirty-five years old. He is not attractive in full face, but his profile seems very much like that of a student, particularly when he wears glasses.

At any rate, Chapman first came to public attention in 1912, when he was sentenced to Sing Sing prison for ten years for grand larceny. The crime was a common one and the name of Gerald Chapman went unheralded. He himself went from Sing Sing to Clinton and then to Auburn, where, on March 20, 1919, he was paroled.

Astounding Mail Robbery.

The astounding mail robbery he engineered occurred October 24, 1921. For 20 days he had thought the robbery out, outlining his plans to two accomplices he had picked up—George Brown and Charles Lambert—in an uptown cafe. They induced a platform man at the post office to tip them off when an unprotected driver went out and to make sure that his trunk was filled with valuable mail.

They were tipped off. A truck left with registered pouches containing $1,454,129 in cash, jewelry and securities. The three stole an automobile and attacked the truck, held up the driver, tied a mail bag over his head and escaped. They went for a few days into hiding at Lake Ronkonkoma, far out on Long Island, a beautiful but sparsely settled spot.

Chapman couldn't stand such quiet life and within a few days he came to New York, bought a high-priced automobile and began to live at the rate of $1,000 a day. He wasn't caught because few people knew him. He must have passed hundreds of detectives on the lookout for him, but not a one spotted him because he didn't look the part. A gentlemanly man, with eye-glasses, or at times a monole, a man who was later nicknamed "The Count" and "The Professor," was hardly one to pick up as a holdup suspect.

Sought New Crimes.

He might well have been, for busy weeks followed the mail holdup. Chapman and his accomplices didn't dare dispose of the bonds they had obtained and they soon ran short of cash. They went to Niagara Falls for new crimes.

Five weeks after what Lambert called "our big job," they held up an American Express company truck at Niagara Falls and got $70,000 in travelers' checks. At the same time they robbed the jewelry store of Isaac Throb, knocking its proprietor unconscious when he resisted.

They then robbed a jewelry store in Binghamton and the post office at Fulton, after which they returned to New York. They determined to go to Europe to see if they could dispose of the securities they held. The trip was unsuccessful and Chapman returned to America. He evidently had no fear whatever of arrest.

But he was finally arrested. In July of 1922, eight months after their crime, Chapman and his two accomplices were caught in a luxurious apartment they occupied at No. 12 Gramercy park. Their apprehension came about as the result of excellent detective work by inspectors of the Post Office department and detectives of the Pinkerton agency and the American Express company.

One of the orders stolen in Niagara Falls trapped them. They gave it to their landlady while they lived there. A detective, Gordon T. McCarthy, had to win their confidence and friendship. He did, posing as a safe blower. He had to talk, eat, rest and move about as a safe blower in every action, as a single slip in his impersonation would have disclosed his deceit to his crafty crime-wise quarry.

Arsenal in Apartment.

Chapman's apartment showed that he was hardly the man his mild manners proclaimed him to be. In it, in addition to $400,000 in securities, were several automatic pistols of American and German make, Maxim silencers, ammunition and the materials needed for intricate forgery. Some bonds were found neatly altered. Later some of the forgeries were found to be so clever that they went through the Treasury department.

But there, too, was the other side of him. There were more than twenty suits in the apartment. There were overcoats of all sorts, sport togs, shirts innumerable and all the accessories.

Daring? Perhaps yes. No sooner had Chapman been caught than he made his first attempt to escape. While he was in the post office building west of Pennsylvania station in a room with several officials, he suddenly made a dash for an open window. He went through it in such a manner that his captors thought certainly he must have plunged himself to death three stories below. But he only stepped on the broad coping outside the window and quickly ran around the building jammed tightly to the wall until he found a vacant room, where he hid. But he was soon caught.

This was really Chapman's only conscious attempt at melodrama. He said later:

"I jumped because you had my wife in a room grilling her for hours and hours until she was nearly a wreck."

At his trial, Chapman acted the professor. He was studious of all that happened, watching proceeding through dignified shell-rimmed glasses and taking notes with a well-sharpened pencil. He had a man and a woman for his counsel, and whenever the woman spoke to him he rose.

Low, Soft Voice.

When he spoke, he revealed a voice that was a joy to listen to. It was low pitched and soft and he knew how to use it. He was careful in his enunciation, something quite unknown where thief meets thief. He was free spoken and pleasant, yet never effusive. He was as graceful and quick of voice and as gentle as he was of manner.

Well, he got 25 years. He was sentenced August, 1922, to Atlanta. March 27, 1923, he escaped. With another prisoner he overpowered a guard in the hospital ward, sawed through a steel-grated window, made rope ladders out of bed sheets, slid to the ground—some 30 feet—and climbed two high walls.

Chapman was immediately pursued and when he gave fight he was not only recaptured but shot three times in the bargain. As his wounds were serious he was put in a hospital at Athens, Ga., not far from the penitentiary and on the night of April 4 he again escaped.

This time, taking advantage of the momentary absence of a guard, Chapman used his bedclothes as a rope and slid out the window to the ground. But before he left he donned the clothes of the absent guard. A check-up showed that at best he had 40 minutes to make his getaway, but they put bloodhounds and innumerable detectives on his trail in vain.

Two nights later a nurse told Harry Bishop, a special guard, she had been hearing strange sounds in the neighborhood of the basement. Bishop and the nurse went to the basement. When the guard switched on the light there was Chapman, in his guard's suit, sitting on a pipe. He was barefooted and quite a frightful looking object compared with the immaculate Gerald Chapman of New York. The guard grabbed him and told him to put on his shoes. Then the nurse shrieked, "Don't let him get me!" and promptly had hysterics, falling into Bishop's arms. Bishop tried to quiet the nurse, telephone for help and watch Chapman. He succeeded in only two of these tasks. When a degree of order was restored and others came to the basement Chapman had walked out the door.

Later two men were arrested here who were believed to have aided him and supplied him with money temporarily, but they were never tried. He was in bad shape physically when he got away, but evidently his mentality was unimpaired, for he eluded all the forces of the government.

Chapman is the man. It is charged, who with Walter E. Shean, son of a prominent hotel owner of Springfield, Mass., was robbing the department store of Davidson & Leventhal, in New Britain, recently. They were trapped and Shean surrendered. But the man believed to have been Chapman turned on the three officers confronting him and fired. Patrolman James Skelly fell dead.—New York World.

OFFICE BUILDING

State Auditor Tracy Asks General Assembly for Definite Instructions.

The forthcoming report of Auditor of State Joseph T. Tracy, has the following:

"The State Office Building Commission was created by HOUSE BILL No. 264, Eighty-fifth General Assembly, and provided that a state office building should be constructed on lands contiguous to the State House.

"The personnel of the Commission consists of the Governor, the Attorney General and the Auditor of State. Organizations effected on September 7, 1923.

Various plans and suggestions were submitted by architects and other interested organizations and citizens. A committee of architects employed in the state service was appointed by the commission and instructed to submit recommendations. The report of said committee was submitted on February 8, 1924, and was referred to the state architect with instructions to present his views thereon. The architect has not, as yet, submitted his report. We are informed that he has compiled much valuable information as to the space needed by various state departments.

"The entire matter presented so many angles and was deemed to be of such vital importance to the state that the direct representatives of the people should, in our opinion, give more definite instructions as to the location of said building. This should receive the early attention of the general assembly particularly on account of the fact that there is no adequate provision for the filing of valuable records very many of which could not be restored in the event of loss by fire."

In Memoriam.

Editor Union-Herald: — Frances Leona Dailey, daughter of William and Nancy Graves Dailey, was born in Jackson township, December 20, 1882, and departed this life in White Cross hospital Columbus, November 20, 1924, aged 41 years and 11 months.

She was united in marriage to Daniel W. Row at Circleville, December 24, 1901. To this union six children were born, all of whom are living. She was a member of the United Brethren church at Robtown and always willing to do anything she could, altho ill health kept her from attending services many times when she would like to have gone.

It can truly be said of Mrs. Row that she was a devoted wife and mother. There are left to mourn their loss, besides the husband and children one sister, Mrs. Elmer Herron, of Akron and one brother, Arthur, of near Chillicothe.

Funeral services were held Saturday from the home. Rev. Mr. Gibson and Rev. Mr. Mills, of Ashville, officiating. Burial in Forest cemetery.

Happiness in Usefulness.

"Dar is de same difference between plain an' fancy folks," said Uncle Eben, "dat dar is between chickens an' canaries. De old hen scratchin' aroun' on her own account in de yard is happier an' mo' useful dan de bird in de gilded cage."
